What you may see in this park

This forest is composed of broad-leaved, deciduous trees. These are often called “hardwoods”. They are a renewable natural resource often used for making furniture, flooring and cabinets. It is called a “Temperate Deciduous Forest” or “Temperate Hardwood Forest” because it is in the Earth’s temperate climate zone. This patch or “stands” of forest started naturally on an old field about 1955. More than a dozen different kinds of hardwoods can be found on the Nature Center property.
